It is a shame that our Government wastes so much time, energy and money on such frivolous matters as this. Microsoft has created for our citizenry, both directly and through a trickle-down effect, a virtually immeasurable amount of wealth, productivity, employment and cause to pursue entrepreneurial aspirations. Limiting Microsoft's pursuit of providing shareholders - and for that matter the public at large, the full effect of the Company's best efforts is at best poor government. I feel that our society should remain one that is both Capitalistic and Democratic to its core. This means that sometimes the labors of some give them advantages over others. To take away Microsoft's ability to labor to its fullest muddles the core of our society. We will look back someday and realize it was a mistake.

Wouldn't it be wonderful if those that so vocally call upon the Constitution as justification for twisted action held those unbendable words in higher esteem?
